

Little Artists Storyboards

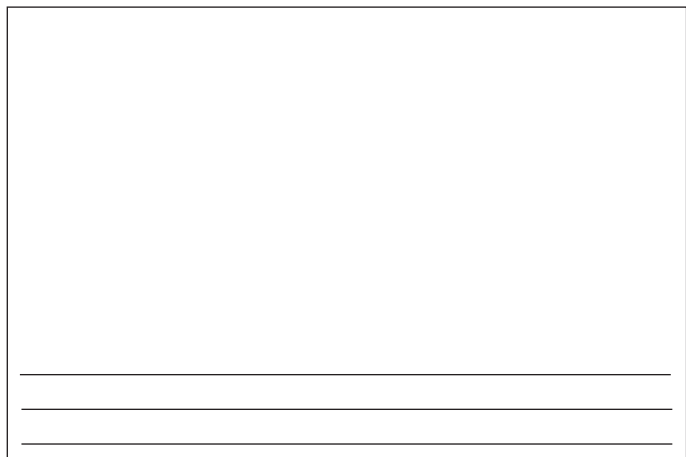

Stan Douglas 7 November 2014 – 15 February 2015

Stan Douglas builds stories by finding out about the history of specific places and memories associated with them.

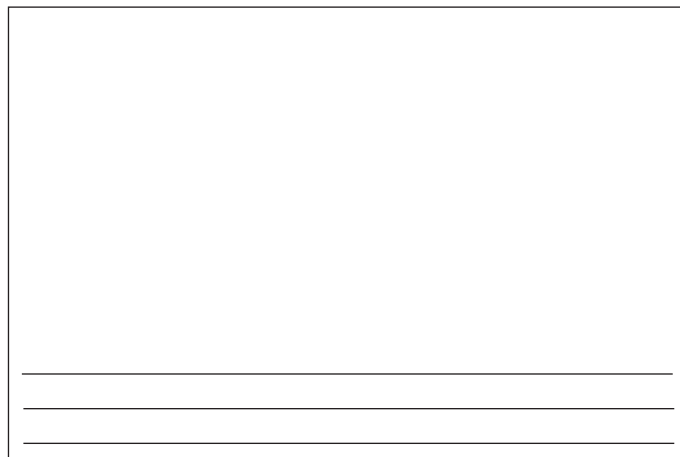

A storyboard is a written or drawn series of events called frames that form the scenes in a film. Imagine you're preparing to make a film about The Fruitmarket Gallery. Have a go at making your own storyboard by drawing and writing your imagined scenes in the frames below. What might the history of the building be? What memories do you have from being here, or from your journey here? Be as imaginative as you can. Your story can be a series of ideas and doesn't have to have a beginning, middle and an end. You can give your film a title if you like.
